

EdCAP Students and Financial Aid

When students attend Edmonds Community College, federal financial aid regulations require the college to review your EdCC transcript and determine if you made satisfactory academic progress during your previous enrollment for high school completion. If you did not complete the credits you enrolled for, or if you received poor grades, you may not be eligible to receive financial aid. Please note the following:

- EdCC evaluates all credits on your transcript, even if you did not receive financial aid at the time you took the classes.
- Classes taken for high school completion, including the Running Start and EdCAP programs, are included in our evaluation.
- The college does not include ABE, GED, or ESL classes in our evaluation.

How Does Your Edmonds Community College Transcript Affect Your Future?

If the college determines you did not make satisfactory academic progress during your previous enrollment, there are two possible options:

1. The college may go ahead and award you conditionally, but place you on Warning Status, or,
2. EdCC may notify you that you are not eligible for financial aid and offer the option of petitioning for reinstatement of your aid eligibility.

Note: When submitting a petition, you must explain why you were not able to make satisfactory academic progress when previously attending Edmonds Community College. The college financial aid office takes into consideration any extenuating circumstances that prevented you from successfully completing your classes, the amount of time you have been away from school, steps you are taking to help you satisfactorily complete your classes in the future, and if you were attending under a high school completion program.

If your college GPA (Grade Point Average) is below a 2.0 and it is mathematically impossible for you to raise your GPA to at least a 2.0 within the current school year, your petition will not be approved.
